COMMITTEE STATEMENT AND VIEWS

PURPOSE AND SUMMARY

The main purpose of the Program Assessment and Results (PAR) Act is to improve the Government Performance and Results Act (GPRA) of 1993, P.L. 103–62, by implementing a program review and evaluation process that attempts to determine the strengths and weaknesses of Federal programs with a particular focus on the results produced by individual programs. Furthermore, the information gathered in the review and evaluation process established by the PAR Act will build on the groundwork laid by GPRA to help the executive branch make informed management decisions and evidence-based funding requests aimed at achieving positive results. Finally, the program reviews created by the PAR Act will provide congressional policy makers with the information needed to conduct more effective oversight, to make better-informed authorization decisions, and to make more evidence-based spending decisions that achieve positive results for the American people.

The PAR Act amends GPRA to require the Director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) to review each Federal program, as defined by OMB, at least once every five fiscal years. The choice of a five-year cycle divides the workload of evaluating all Federal programs into manageable segments for OMB. Attempting to evaluate the performance of all Federal programs in one year was a major impediment to the success of past attempts at performance measurement by previous Administrations. The five-year cycle also parallels the time frame used by OMB in its Program Assessment Rating Tool (PART), which OMB has used to evaluate programs, representing 20% of all Federal spending each year beginning with the fiscal year 2003 budget cycle. The PAR Act does not interfere with OMB's timeline for using PART to complete program assessments of each program in the Federal budget, nor does the PAR Act attempt to codify the specific methodology used by PART. Instead, the PAR Act directs OMB to conduct reviews of programs in consultation with the relevant agency that administers the program and to evaluate each program's purpose, design, strategic plan, management, results, and any other matters that OMB considers appropriate.

As OMB develops its criteria for which programs to review each fiscal year, the PAR Act requires OMB to take into account the advantages of reviewing program activities with similar functions or purposes during the same fiscal year. The intent of this language is to ensure that the functions of government that cut across several programs and potentially cut across several agencies are reviewed at the same time. This information can then be used to compare the performance of programs against one another and to seek managerial and budget changes that capitalize on the best practices of the programs that are most successful in achieving the outcomes they were designed to achieve. In addition to considering the crosscutting nature of government functions, the PAR Act also directs OMB to review program activities more frequently than every five fiscal years in cases in which programs are determined to be of higher priority, special circumstances exist, improvements have been made, or the head of the relevant agency and OMB determine that more frequent review is warranted. Requiring more frequent reviews in these circumstances will ensure that the lessons learned from programs that make improvements may be cultivated more frequently and that programs that continually fail to achieve their goals will be scrutinized more closely.

The results of program reviews conducted under the PAR Act will be reported to Congress with the President's next budget following the end of the fiscal year in which the program reviews were conducted. OMB currently uses this method of reporting in conjunction with the PART. The Committee is pleased with the high level of transparency that OMB has exhibited in reporting the results of the programs that have been evaluated using the PART. In an effort to maintain this level of transparency under the PAR Act, the Act requires that OMB make every effort to ensure the transparency of the report. For any program reviewed, OMB should publish the information necessary for the public to understand what methods were used to evaluate the program, what information was derived from the application of those methods to the program, and what conclusions were drawn from the information derived. There is some concern that the PART has been unable to complete evaluations for some of the programs to which it has been applied over the three-year period in which assessments were conducted. Although the percentage of programs receiving a score of "results not demonstrated" has decreased over the past two years, it remains too high. We encourage OMB and the agency community to work to continue to refine the evaluation criteria to ensure meaningful reporting for all federal programs, including those programs administered cooperatively among state and local stakeholders.

Finally, the bill will move the due date for submitting strategic plans under GPRA to September 30 of each year following a presidential election and would change the duration of the coverage of the plans from 5 years to 4 years. These changes would improve the usefulness and timeliness of strategic plans by giving the management team of the most recently elected President enough time to assemble and set its goals for the President's term.

BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR THE LEGISLATION

The Government Performance and Results Act (GPRA) of 1993, P.L. 103-62, has laid a solid foundation for agencies working with Congress to set strategic goals and begin to utilize performance-based information. Building on GPRA, Congress must take the next step toward reforming the way the government conducts its business.

Prior efforts to make the Federal government more effective—the Hoover Commission, Zero-Based Budgeting, the Planning-Programming-Budgeting System, and Reinventing Government—have come and gone with little lasting effect. Federal managers have learned that if they wait, each new Administration is likely to attempt yet another broad-based reform. From a management standpoint, it is difficult in that type of environment to make long-range plans, and it's next to impossible to achieve the kind of cultural shift needed to reform the management of the Federal government.

GPRA requires that agencies focus attention on program evaluation as one of six aspects of their strategic plans. Unfortunately, the Government Accountability Office reports (GAO-04-38) that program evaluation is the one area where departments consistently come up short. Not only have agencies failed to comply with this requirement, the valuable information that stands to be gained from these evaluations is not culled, coordinated, or presented in a useful way.

By creating and using the Program Assessment Rating Tool, or PART, the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) has gone a step beyond the strategic plans required by GPRA and implemented a system for evaluating the performance and results of individual Federal programs. The next logical step is to codify the requirement for a coordinated evidence-based review of programs. Clearly, developing a better understanding of how government operates program by program is a good idea. As such, the PAR Act is necessary to ensure that program assessments be required for this and future Administrations.

The PAR Act does not seek to codify the use of the PART specifically. Rather, the Act amends GPRA by establishing a requirement for program reviews. Specifically, the OMB is required under the Act to review each program activity at least once every five years. Requiring OMB to be responsible for overseeing program assessment data will be a great step forward in realizing the reforms envisioned by GPRA and will make the Federal government more efficient and results oriented.

Information gleaned from these program reviews will be useful across the board to all stakeholders. Members of Congress, taxpayers, Federal managers and the Executive Branch need to know if programs are being managed effectively and if they are achieving the desired results. Further, the PAR Act will facilitate data comparisons among different programs and across agencies, to see how different programs with similar goals are achieving results. Members of Congress can use the information to make informed budget decisions and conduct more effective oversight. It will help the taxpayers see what they are getting for their money. Most important, Federal managers will use the information to improve the way they manage programs. The results will be a more effective and efficient government for the good of all Americans.

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY

On January 4, 2005, Representative Todd R. Platts (R-PA), Chairman of the Subcommittee on Government Management, Finance and Accountability of the Committee on Government Reform, along with Representative Tom Davis (R-VA), Chairman of the Committee on Government Reform, introduced H.R. 185, the "Program Assessment and Results Act" to amend and improve the Government Performance and Results Act (GPRA) of 1993, P.L. 103-62. The bill was subsequently referred to the Committee on Government Reform.

On March 10, 2005, the full Government Reform Committee held a business meeting to mark up H.R. 185.

During the markup Rep. Edolphus Towns (D-NY), the ranking member of the Government Management, Finance and Accountability Subcommittee, offered an amendment seeking to require the head of the Office of Management and Budget to provide notice and an opportunity for public comment in the Federal Register on a detailed description in draft form of each program to be assessed, the draft performance goals for each such program and the draft criteria used to evaluate each program. The amendment also called for the publication in the Federal Register of the final list of programs to be assessed, the final performance goals and final criteria used to evaluate, along with a summary of all public comment. The amendment also sought to add a “sunset” provision to the bill, which would have terminated the program assessments required under the legislation in 2013. This amendment was defeated by a vote of 16 “nays” and 15 “yeas”.

Also, during the business meeting Rep. Waxman (D-CA) offered an amendment that required program reviews conducted pursuant to the bill to be performed by the heads of agencies, rather than by OMB. The amendment failed on a vote of 17 “nays” to 15 “yeas”.

The committee approved H.R. 185 by a vote of 19 “yeas” and 14 “nays” and ordered it reported favorably to the full House of Representatives for consideration.

SECTION-BY-SECTION

Section 1.—Short title

The Act may be cited as the “Program Assessment and Results Act.”

Section 2.—Findings

This section summarizes the findings of Congress with respect to the following: the lack of program performance information available to Federal managers and Congress for decision-making; the importance of performance information to making good managerial and budget decisions; and the foundation that the Government Performance and Results Act of 1993 (GPRA), P.L. 103–362, has laid for program performance reviews.

Section 3.—Purpose

This section states the purposes of the Act, which are: to amend and improve GPRA by implementing program reviews that determine the strength and weakness of Federal programs; to use the information gathered for the executive branch to make informed management decisions and evidence-based funding requests; and to provide Congress with information necessary to conduct more effective oversight, to make better-informed authorization decisions, and to make more evidence-based spending decisions.

Section 4.—Program review and evaluation

Paragraph (a) establishes a requirement for program reviews by amending chapter 11 of title 31, United States Code, as amended by GPRA.

This amendment to GPRA adds “Section 1120. Program review and evaluation.” to the end of chapter 11 of title 31, United States Code.

Paragraph (a) of the new section 1120 requires the Director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) to review each program activity at least once every 5 fiscal years.

The bill as passed by the committee includes language stating that the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall “to the maximum extent practicable” conduct a review of each program every five years. This language was included in the final version of H.R. 185 to give minimal flexibility to the Director should a special circumstance arise where an assessment of a certain program is deemed unnecessary. The clause, “to the maximum extent practicable” is not intended to give the Director wholesale flexibility or the ability to exempt any programs from review without a legitimate reason. Should the Director seek to exempt any program from this review requirement he shall notify the Congress, including the House Committee on Government Reform and Senate Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs, in writing explaining the specific reasons why the review is deemed unnecessary.

Paragraph (b) of section 1120 requires the Director in conducting a review of a program activity to coordinate with the relevant agency and evaluate each program activity’s purpose, design, strategic plan, management, results, and any other matters that the Director considers appropriate.

Paragraph (c) of section 1120 requires the Director to develop criteria for deciding which program activities to review each fiscal year. It further instructs the Director to take into account the advantages of reviewing program activities with similar functions or purposes during the same fiscal year.

Paragraph (d) of section 1120 requires the Director to make every effort to review program activities more frequently than every 5 fiscal years in cases in which programs are determined to be of higher priority, special circumstances exist, improvements have been made, or the head of the relevant agency and the Director determine that more frequent review is warranted.

Paragraph (e) of section 1120 requires that at least 90 days prior to completing the assessments required under this section that the Director publish on the OMB website or successor website and provide to the House Committee on Government Reform and Senate Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs a list of all programs to be assessed during a fiscal year and the criteria to be used in those assessments. This section further requires that OMB provide a formal mechanism for interested persons to comment on the programs being assessed and the criteria used to assess those programs.

Paragraph (f) of section 1120 requires:

(1) The Director to submit the results of the reviews for a fiscal year to the Congress along with the President’s next budget following the end of the fiscal year in which the reviews were conducted;

(2) Specifies the criteria that shall be required for the report.

Paragraph (g) of section 1120:

(1) Establishes provisions for the submission of program assessments containing classified information.

(A) Requires that a copy of the assessment (including the classified information) be provided to the appropriate committees of the House of Representatives and the Senate, and

(B) Requires that, consistent with statutory law, an appendix containing a list of each assessment referenced in (A) be provided to the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate.

(2) Establishes that upon request from the Committee on Government Reform of the House or the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate, the Director of OMB shall provide to the requesting committee a copy of any assessment or appendix referenced in subparagraph (A) or (B) respectively.

(3) Establishes that the term “classified information” refers to matters in section 552(b)(1)(A) of title 5 U.S.C.

Paragraph (h) of section 1120 establishes that the functions and activities authorized by this section shall be considered inherently governmental functions and performed only by Federal employees.

Paragraph (b) of Section 4 provides that the Director shall have 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act to issue guidance to implement the requirements of section 1120.

Paragraph (c) of section 4 makes conforming amendments to Section 1115(g) of title 31.

Section 5.—Strategic planning amendments

Paragraph (a) amends section 306 of title 5, United States Code, to change the date for submitting strategic plans as required under GPRA to September 30 of each year following a presidential election. This change in date makes the release of strategic plans correspond with the change in leadership from one Administration to the next.

Paragraph (b) amends section 306 of title 5, United States Code, to change the period of coverage for strategic plans from five years to four years, again corresponding with a presidential term.

EXPLANATION OF AMENDMENTS

The Committee did not adopt any amendments.

APPLICATION OF LAW TO THE LEGISLATIVE BRANCH

Section 102(b)(3) of Public Law 104–1 requires a description of the application of this bill to the legislative branch where the bill relates to the terms and conditions of employment or access to public services and accommodations. This bill improves the Government Performance and Results Act (GPRA) of 1993, P.L. 103–62, by implementing a program review and evaluation process that attempts to determine the strengths and weaknesses of Federal programs with a particular focus on the results produced by individual programs. As such this bill does not relate to employment or access to public services and accommodations.

STATEMENT OF OVERSIGHT FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE COMMITTEE

In compliance with clause 3(c)(1) of rule XIII and clause (2)(b)(1) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee's oversight findings and recommendations are reflected in the descriptive portions of this report.

STATEMENT OF GENERAL PERFORMANCE GOALS AND OBJECTIVES

In accordance with clause 3(c)(4) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee's performance goals and objectives are reflected in the descriptive portions of this report.

CONSTITUTIONAL AUTHORITY STATEMENT

Under clause 3(d)(1) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee must include a statement citing the specific powers granted to Congress to enact the law proposed by H.R. 185. Article I, Section 8, Clause 18 of the Constitution of the United States grants the Congress the power to enact this law.

FEDERAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE ACT

The Committee finds that the legislation does not establish or authorize the establishment of an advisory committee within the definition of 5 U.S.C. App., Section 5(b).

UNFUNDED MANDATE STATEMENT

Section 423 of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act (as amended by Section 101(a)(2) of the Unfunded Mandate Reform Act, P.L. 104–4) requires a statement whether the provisions of the reported bill include unfunded mandates. In compliance with this requirement the Committee has received a letter from the Congressional Budget Office included herein.

COMMITTEE ESTIMATE

Clause 3(d)(2) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives requires an estimate and a comparison by the Committee of the costs that would be incurred in carrying out H.R. 185. However, clause 3(d)(3)(B) of that rule provides that this requirement does not apply when the Committee has included in its report a timely submitted cost estimate of the bill prepared by the Director of the Congressional Budget Office under section 402 of the Congressional Budget Act.

BUDGET AUTHORITY AND CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE COST ESTIMATE

With respect to the requirements of clause 3(c)(2) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives and section 308(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 and with respect to requirements of clause (3)(c)(3) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives and section 402 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the Committee has received the following cost estimate for H.R. 185 from the Director of Congressional Budget Office:

MARCH 17, 2005.

Hon. TOM DAVIS,
Chairman, Committee on Government Reform,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has prepared the enclosed cost estimate for H.R. 185, the Program Assessment and Results Act.

If you wish further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them. The CBO staff contact is Matthew Pickford.

Sincerely,

DOUGLAS HOLTZ-EAKIN,
Director.

Enclosure.

H.R. 185—Program Assessment and Results Act

H.R. 185 would amend the Government Performance and Results Act of 1993 to require the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) to review, to the maximum extent practicable, each program activity in the federal government at least once every five years. The review, to be performed by government employees, would focus on the purpose, design, strategic plan, management, results, and other appropriate measures of each program. Results of those reviews would be submitted to the Congress.

Most of the provisions of H.R. 185 would codify and expand the current practices of OMB regarding federal program assessments. OMB currently reviews program performance through its Program Assessment Rating Tool (PART) which was developed to assess and improve program performance throughout the federal government. Based on information from OMB, CBO estimates that implementing this bill would not significantly increase the ongoing costs of reviewing federal programs. To the extent that reviews lead to improved program performance, subsequent legislation could modify the budgets of federal program operations.

Enacting the bill would not affect direct spending or revenues. H.R. 185 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act and would not affect the budgets of state, local, or tribal governments.

The CBO staff contact for this estimate is Matthew Pickford. This estimate was approved by Peter H. Fontaine, Deputy Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.

CHANGES IN EXISTING LAW MADE BY THE BILL, AS REPORTED

In compliance with clause 3(e) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, changes in existing law made by the bill, as reported, are shown as follows (existing law proposed to be omitted is enclosed in black brackets, new matter is printed in italics, existing law in which no change is proposed is shown in roman):

MINORITY VIEWS

H.R. 185, the Program Assessment and Results Act (PARA), would require every federal program to be reviewed or evaluated at least once every five years. We support the concept of programmatic reviews. However, as drafted, this bill allows the program review process to be politicized. In addition, the bill fails to ensure adequate public participation. Finally, the bill permanently authorizes these reviews whereas it should have a termination date to ensure its usefulness.

During full Committee markup, we proposed amendments to PARA addressing these three fundamental flaws. An amendment by Rep. Henry A. Waxman would have required agencies, and not the partisan Office of Management and Budget (OMB), to perform the bill's required program assessments. An amendment by Rep. Ed Towns would have enhanced transparency by requiring a notice and comment process prior to the conducting of assessments. Another amendment by Rep. Ed Towns would have sunsetted the bill in the year 2013. Because these three amendments were rejected, we cannot support PARA as reported by the Committee on Government Reform.

THERE IS NO ROOM FOR POLITICS IN THE PROGRAM ASSESSMENT PROCESS

PARA expands on the requirements of the Government Performance and Results Act (GPRA). GPRA requires agencies to set annual goals and measure their performance in achieving those goals. PARA adds a periodic five-year review to provide a detailed analysis at the individual program level.

As drafted, this bill deviates from GPRA in one significant respect. Instead of requiring agencies to set performance goals and evaluate the performance of their programs, PARA requires the White House, through the OMB, to pick the criteria and evaluate performance. The Waxman amendment sought to fix this problem.

When Congress passed GPRA, it clearly wanted the agencies to set the goals and measures, not OMB. The Government Accountability Office (GAO) highlighted this issue when it reviewed the Administration's Program Assessment Rating Tool (PART), upon which the bill before us is based. When explaining that OMB intends to modify GPRA goals and measures in order to align them with the PART, GAO found that "OMB's judgment about appropriate goals and measures is substituted for GPRA judgments based on a community of stakeholder interests," including Congress.¹

¹Government Accountability Office, Performance Budgeting: Observations on the Use of OMB's Program Assessment Rating Tool for the Fiscal Year 2004 Budget, 6 (Jan. 2004) (GAO-04-174).

Congress expresses its priorities through statutes authorizing agency activities. But OMB is not tasked with implementing those statutes. Instead, OMB implements the priorities of the White House. In fact, many agencies, and especially those charged with protecting public health, worker safety, and the environment, view OMB as hostile to the agencies' fundamental missions.

OMB has a history of using the PART review to criticize congressional actions and priorities. OMB rated the Community Development Block Grant program as "ineffective" and proposed its virtual elimination in the FY 2006 budget. OMB, in its PART analysis, partially blamed Congress. OMB explained that the programs mission is not clear because "throughout CDBG's legislative history there has been ambiguity."² Similarly, OMB criticized the acid rain program, created under the 1990 Clean Air Act Amendments and widely regarded as a tremendously successful program and a model for environmental regulations. OMB penalized this program for complying with its explicit statutory directives from Congress. OMB's rationale for downgrading the acid rain program states that these identified program deficiencies would be fixed if Congress passed the President's proposal to amend the Clean Air Act.³

In addition to ignoring the will of Congress, OMB does a poor job assessing programs. HOPE VI has been found to be effective by the Urban Institute and the Brookings Institution, as well as the GAO and the HUD Inspector General. Yet OMB in its FY2006 gave the HOPE VI an "ineffective" rating, and then used its rating to justify defunding the program in the FY2006 budget. Also, OMB rated the Superfund removal program as "results not demonstrated" because OMB did not agree with EPA's measure of success. The Superfund program clearly has been a success. It has cleaned up thousands of hazardous waste sites since its creation in 1980 and it is a critically important program that addresses threats ranging from polluted groundwater to radioactive waste.

Congress should not authorize OMB to effectively overrule Congress and set the goals for federal agency activities.

PUBLIC PARTICIPATION IS KEY TO SUCCESSFUL PROGRAM ASSESSMENTS

PARA fails to provide adequately for public input into how programs should be evaluated. The Towns amendment sought to address this deficiency. The amendment would provide a period for public notice and comment on which programs will be reviewed, and what criteria will be used to review them. It does not require OMB or agencies to accept those comments, or modify their plans in any way. It simply creates a forum for public comment.

Stakeholder participation is fundamental to GPRA, the underlying law that this bill seeks to amend. GPRA states that when developing its strategic plans, "the agency shall consult with the Congress, and shall solicit and consider the views and suggestions of those entities potentially affected by or interested in such a plan.”⁴ GAO agrees. It has found that “stakeholder involvement appears critical for getting consensus on goals and measures.”⁵

The Towns amendment was agreed to at the Subcommittee level in the 108th Congress. In a departure from customary practice, it was taken out and replaced with vague and much weaker language in a manager’s amendment at full Committee in the 108th Congress. Similarly, the Towns language was not included in the bill as introduced or as passed out of full Committee in the 109th Congress.

SUNSETTING PARA IS APPROPRIATE

It is appropriate to sunset PARA in order to give Congress the opportunity to review whether the requirements of the bill have been effective and whether the bill should be reauthorized. The second Towns amendment would have sunsetted the bill in 2013.

The language of this Towns amendment was agreed to at the Subcommittee level in the 108th Congress. In addition, this language was included when the bill was considered by the full Committee in the 108th Congress. The sunset language was removed from the bill when it was reintroduced in the 109th Congress.

OTHER ISSUES

We are pleased that some provisions were added to PARA at the request of the minority. They include language on transparency, diversification of program assessments to ensure that both domestic and defense/homeland security programs were being assessed each year, enhanced coordination between OMB and agencies, all program assessments and other requirements of PARA be performed by federal employees, and program assessments that include classified information be available to Congress, but as a classified appendix.
